

What's the Koala's favourite food tree?

How do I photograph the feeling of being in the bush?

Learn the answers and explore Mt Gravatt

Reserve with:

Field Botanist – Ann Moran

Local Photographer – Alan Moore

Koala photo by Alan Moore

Mt Gravatt Environment Group

Environmental and Photography Workshops

Mt Gravatt Environment Group

Sunday 7th August – Fox Gully Bushcare

Environmental Workshop

Field Botanist – Ann Moran

Ann has thirty years practical experience in biodiversity assessment, weed management and revegetation planning. Ann also has a passion for working with people: indigenous communities, teaching or sharing her knowledge on guided walks.

Workshop format:

8:30 – 9:30am Presentation

- Identify local Mt Gravatt plant species
- Learn about food plants for butterflies, moths and birds

10am – 12noon Bush Ramble with Ann

- Identify species
- View areas of local bush re-generation
- Learn to differentiate between native and weed

Photography Workshop

Local Photographer – Alan Moore

Alan is a passionate amateur photographer who has that rare ability to capture that feeling of actually being in the bush to put it on your wall at home.

Workshop format:

1 - 2pm Presentation – theory with examples

- Know your camera - shutter/aperture priority
- Types of photography – macro/telephoto
- Depth of field – getting the focus right
- In the field - equipment
- Your photographic assignment

2 - 4pm Practical – photograph bush with Alan

- Alan will lead a walk that will expose you to a range of photographic subjects
- Share your results on data projector.

Date: 7th August 2011

Time: Environmental Workshop – 8am to 12noon
Photography Workshop – 1pm to 4pm

Location: Fox Gully Bushcare (off O'Grady Street, Upper Mt Gravatt)

Cost: Free – sponsored by BCC Environmental Grant

Morning & afternoon tea provided – BYO picnic lunch if required

Book your place: Email: megoutlook@gmail.com

Phone: Michael Fox 0408 769 405

Dedicated to a better Brisbane

Mt Gravatt Environment Group – www.megoutlook.wordpress.com